

Full-time Lecturer in Chemistry
University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, PA

Description

The Department of Chemistry at the University of Pennsylvania invites applications for a full-time lecturer position. This is a twelve-month, non-tenure track appointment with a flexible starting date of September 2020; possible annual renewal for up to an additional two years contingent on satisfactory performance and approval of the Dean. Responsibilities in year 1 include general chemistry lecture and curriculum development; physical chemistry laboratory, remote demonstration preparation and support; supervision, mentoring, and training of Teaching Assistants in support of the coursework. Summer support will include general chemistry support and demonstration support. The instructor will serve on departmental committees and will advise the Department Chair, Executive Director and Undergraduate Chair on matters related to the coursework described. In renewable years, 2-3 CU's per semester will be supported by this position. The successful candidate will have a PhD in Chemistry, a strong interest and demonstrated success in undergraduate teaching and curriculum development, and outstanding organizational and interpersonal skills with ability to teach a broad range of introductory chemistry coursework in the following areas: general chemistry, physical chemistry lab, organic chemistry and biochemistry.

The Department is committed to promoting a culturally diverse intellectual community, and strongly encourages applications from women and under-represented communities in chemistry.

Applicants must apply online at: apply.interfolio.com/77381. Applicants should supply a curriculum vitae, and the names and contact information of three individuals who will provide a letter of recommendation. Recommenders will be contacted by the University with instructions on how to submit a letter of recommendation to the website. Review of applications will begin August 1 and will continue until the position is filled.
